What is pre-disaster recovery planning (PDRP) ?

Pre-disaster Recovery Planning (PDRP)

“is any planned attempt to strengthen disaster recovery plans, initiatives, and outcomes- before a disaster occurs.” (IRP, 2011)

Challenges of recovery planning;

- Difficult to build consensus due to the dis-organizing community
- Time-limitation
- Complex issues such as land use, housing, infrastructure, economics, etc..

Opportunity of PDRP;

- contains lessons learnt from the previous disaster in peace-time
- potential to minimize the vulnerability in high risk area
- Prioritize the activities for mitigation by PDRP

① After Hanshin Awaji Earthquake (1995-)

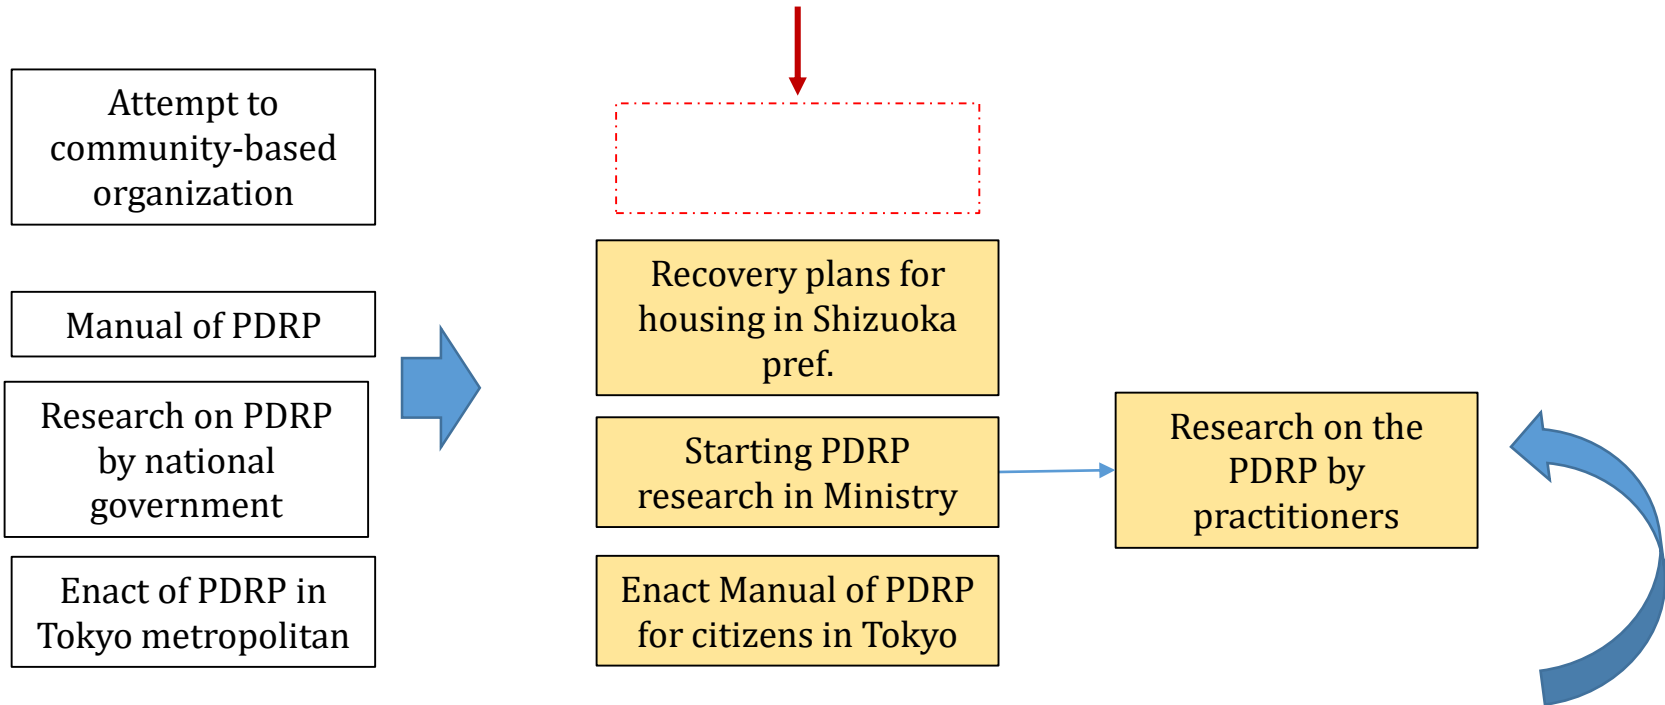

- The consecutive symposiums for PDRP were held in 1997
- Several proposal were adopted in the government of Tokyo metropolitan, though the legislation for PDRP was not included

Two kind of PDRP

Seven Components on PDRP in Japan and U.S

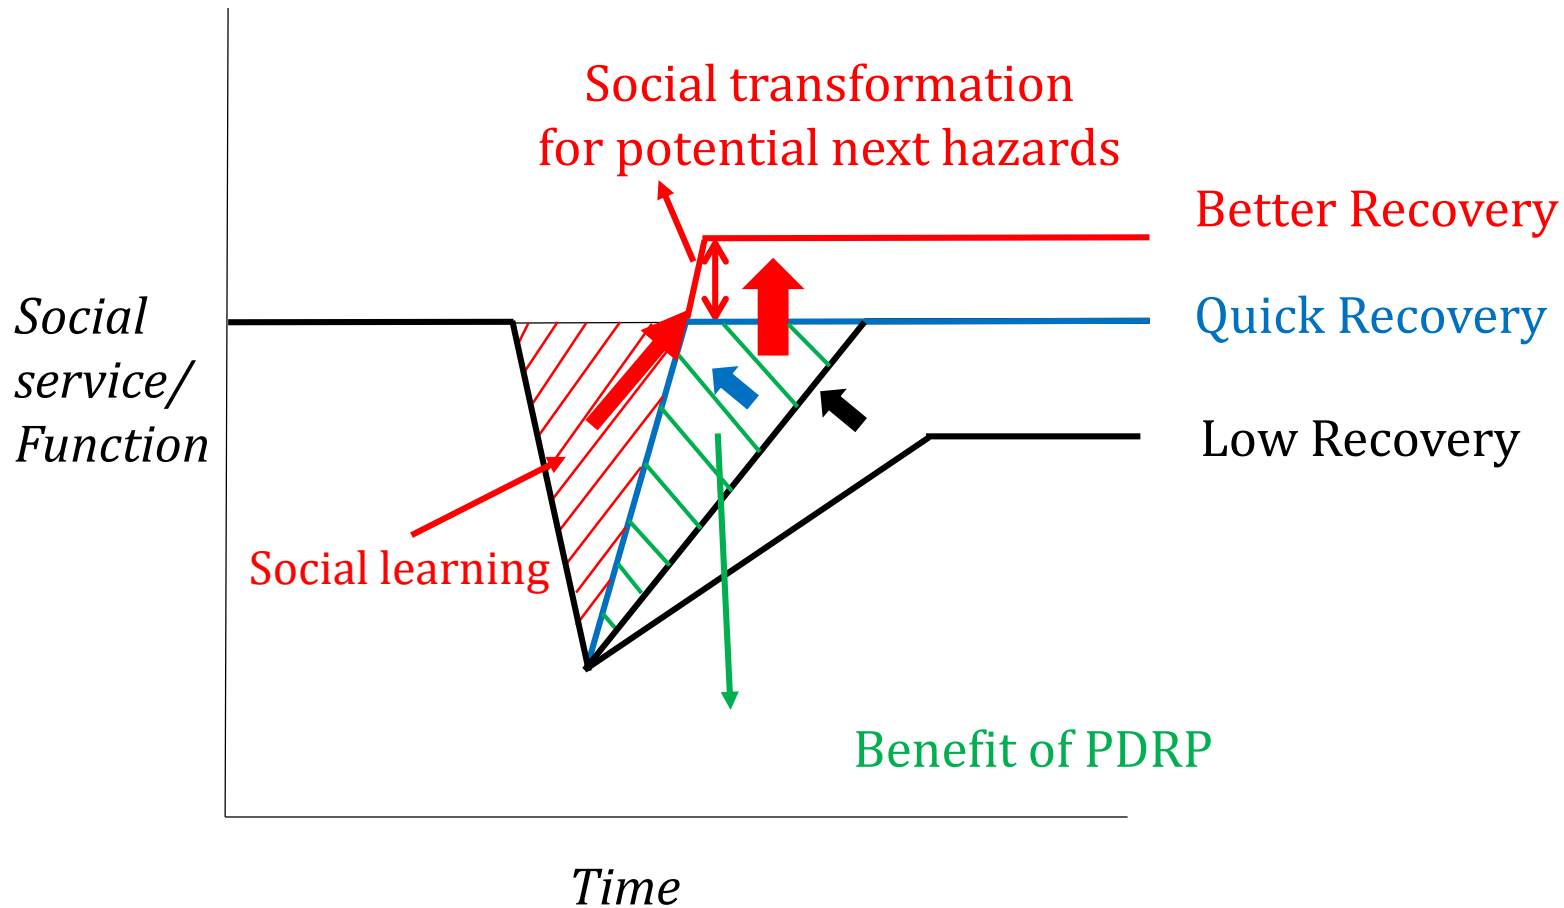

- Housing
- Land Use
- Governmental Organization
- Health, Social Welfare, and Education
- Economic Revival
- Local Community
- Natural Environment

Schematic Concept of PDRP

Objective and Hypothesis

Objective

1. To identify required components on PDRP in ASEAN context
2. To recognize social leaning in affected area from the previous disaster through the field research
3. To analyze social transformation through the Examination of the recovery plan in ASEAN context

Hypothesis

If the lessons learnt from previous disasters (social learning) are incorporated into institutionalized changes (social transformation), better recovery is achieved.

Methodology

- ① List up the record of the mega-natural disasters in ASEAN countries (more than 100 casualty since 2000)
- ② systematize the structure of DRR in ASEAN countries
- ③ Categorize based on the types
- ④ Case study

The Way Forward

1. Field research in affected area to recognize social leaning from the previous disaster
2. Examine the recovery plan and institutionalized change to analyze social transformation
3. Describing the required components of PDRP in each country
